A guide to transforming the contemporary streetscape, one parking space at a time

ADAPTIVE METROPOLIS: USER GENERATED URBANISM

A cohort of citizens, designers, artists, activists, entrepreneurs, government officials, and policymakers across the world are taking action to reinvent public space and reaffirm the 'right to the city'. They employ a series of disparate tactics, combining the limited available resources with a large dose of creativity. They favor small-scale, short-term interventions that involve experimentation and iteration, implementing them through participatory processes and community engagement while opensourcing tools, methodology, and results. Together, they are building the foundations for a usergenerated urbanism. The Adaptive Metropolis symposium will convene a global community of thinkers and doers to discuss the future of this model of city-making.
